

Surtr

The bestial roar of the Surtr resounding from the deep forests and dark dungeons of Azadi strikes fear in the hearts of even the bravest adventurers. Though their origins are unknown, many believe that the Surtr were born from a fallen chunk of the Red Moon that orbits Azadi; however, others believe they were born from the volcanic bowels of the planet.

Thick black fur covers most of their bodies while the fiery magic of the Red Moon burns bright beneath their skin making them glow with raw power. Standing 6 meters (20 feet) tall, Surtr have the horns of a ram and the legs of a goat. Their immense strength and ferocity make them formidable foes for any hero to face. When a Surtr sees an enemy, they have been known to lead up to 20 meters (65 feet) to crush them quickly. If the battle becomes a prolonged affair, the creature unleashes its Fire Breath or Torch Stance magic upon its prey.

Many ancient stories speak of Surtr destroying whole towns, then taking great joy in flaying their victims alive before consuming their flesh. Other stories of the Surtr have them consorting with packs of vicious wolves commanded by their half-human werewolf leaders. Whether there is any truth within these tales, none know, but anyone who has met one of the creatures is unlikely to doubt even the most gruesome of tales.

